The eldest son of the evil emperor Uriel Septim, Tiber Septim is the main character of The Elder Scrolls Series of games. Born on the continent of Summerset, Tiber grew up with his brother Moria at the Imperial Palace, where the two were taught to see the world around them through the eyes of the Emperor. Tiber Septim served as a double agent, reporting to the emperor on the actions of the great and powerful, although this was mainly for entertainment. During his teenage years, Tiber also began to rebel against the emperor, but Tiber would ultimately help Uriel Septim, eventually forcing his father to defeat the emperor and rule over Tamriel with Tiber as his rightful successor. Tiber Septim was a tall, slender young man, often dressed in clothes such as black armor, which were easily recognizable due to the five white stripes down the front of the armor. His long hair, almost always in the same color as his armor, was often tied in a braid. He also had a white, glowing monocle in the left eye and wore a long cloak with a single, black stripe across the front. Tiber Septim usually wore his cloak and monocle at all times, with the cloak hanging over his shoulder, the monocle on his face and attached to a chain around his neck. Tiber's right eye was usually covered with a patch, that could be removed by pressing a button. As a child, he was often shown to be very sensitive about this, and would seek out any female player willing to do so. Tiber's armor was white and the same five-striped color as his monocle, except for the white stripe on the right side, which extended over his entire arm. Tiber Septim sometimes wore boots with white fur trim and a horned symbol across the front, although his boots were a variation of his regular armor. Tiber Septim also wore a large, white shield that was unique to him. This shield contained a large symbol with seven spikes extending from the center. This shield was hung from the right arm of his regular armor. Tiber Septim's shield was stolen by Imperial Guards when he was a young child, and he used it as a replacement until a new shield was made for him. This one was bigger than the first and had an eight-spiked symbol in the center. When Tiber Septim was around 10 years 82157476af
